"HOW can we face the people after indulging in such outrageous discriminations and violations of principle?"
 —CLEVELAND'S LETTER TO WILSON.

"THERE is no excuse for mistaking or misapprehending the feeling and the temper of the rank and file of Democracy. They are discontented under the assertion that their party fails in ability to manage the government, and they are apprehensive that efforts to bring about tariff reform may fail; but they are much more discontented and apprehensive in their fear that Democratic principles may be surrendered."
 —CLEVELAND'S LETTER TO WILSON.

A Prime Requisite.

It is being brought forcibly to the attention of members of Congress that an important part of a statesman's education should be a thorough knowledge of the art of punctuation. The discovery of several errors in the new tariff bill has emphasized this fact, and the probability that the errors may result in suits, to be settled only in the courts renders the carelessness or ignorance of clerks, and the inability of the legislators to know when the punctuation is wrong, exceedingly embarrassing.

It is recalled that the misplacing of a parenthesis in the confectionary schedule of the McKinley law made a great difference in the amount of duty to be paid on candies, and it is now discovered that the placing of a semi-colon where a colon was intended, will require the enactment of a separate bill making diamonds dutiable, or they will be admitted free, as the erroneous punctuation makes the law read that they shall be. A judicial decision, however, may construe that the semi-colon can be called a colon for the purposes of the act.

A similar error occurs in the seed schedule, and if the courts decide that the semi-colon must be imagined by the customs officers to be a colon in disguise in the case of the diamond schedule, then they must also decide in the case of the seed schedule also. If the intent of the law makers is to govern rather than the wording of the law, then a re-enactment of the schedules will not be necessary. However the courts decide the test suits that will be brought, unless Congress remedies the matter with a popgun bill in the meantime, will govern the treasury officers in administering the law. There is a legend that a bill once passed the West Virginia legislature with the title: "A bill to prevent the owners of hogs from running at large," but the language was corrected before the law was printed.

These incidents serve to show that too much care cannot be exercised on the smallest details of legislation, and demonstrate how the ignorance or carelessness of a clerk may undo the supposed results of months of hard work by statesmen to carry out a party pledge or party policy. As in the case of the alleged West Virginia bill, knowledge of grammar as well as a familiarity with the rules of punctuation is very often necessary.

Why Wales is Glad.

The following interesting bit of news was contained in the Associated Press dispatch last night:

LONDON, August 17.—Many tin plate works in South Wales, which have been closed for some time, are preparing to resume work, in view of the passage of the tariff bill in Washington.

There is a great contrast between the character of this news and the character of the dispatches that came from Wales after the passage of the McKinley bill. The new measure reduces the tin plate protection to such a degree that the Welsh manufacturers reasonably hope to recover at least a portion of their lost footing in America.

The tin plate mills which have begun operation since the McKinley bill passed, some of them in the vicinity of Wheeling, will not be so well protected as they were. With renewed competition from Great Britain it may be found that the wage workers will have to stand the amount of the reduction in the tariff.

Mr. Hill was heard in the senate again yesterday. The despised New York senator is very much in evidence these days.

Supplies for the Orient.

The effect on this country of the China-Japanese war is already being felt. A foretaste of the profit we will derive if the struggle is long continued was afforded yesterday, when the City of Peking sailed from San Francisco with a very large cargo of supplies for Chinese and Japanese ports. For China, it is stated, there were 16,938 barrels of flour; 4,497 pounds of ginseng, 65 cases of canned fruit, 178 cases of canned meats, 11,250 pounds of pearl barley, 75 packages of provisions and 69 packages of groceries. For Japan there were 1,412 barrels of flour; 15 rolls of leather, 55,175 pounds of compressed cotton, 500 barrels of corn beef and 474 cases of canned meats.

Should the war turn out to be a lengthy struggle the agricultural and manufacturing interests of this country will be benefited greatly, for China and Japan will naturally look to us for such supplies as they are unable to produce themselves. Our communication with both countries is direct, and, unless our crops prove greater failures than are now expected, we will be able to meet all reasonable demands.

A fight between bandits at Tlacoachistahuacan, Mexico, was chronicled in yesterday's dispatches. The cause of the fight is not given, but it may have been the result of a dispute about the pronunciation of the name of the town.

A Pertinent Inquiry.

In another column a Martinsburg correspondent makes a pertinent inquiry regarding the disposal of the surplus school fund. It is unnecessary to state that the question propounded calls for a reply from the state board of public works.

It is charged, in effect, that certain banks in which members of the administration are interested are favored as depositories for the surplus or irreducible school fund, and that it is not being invested in a manner which would yield an interest to be applied to the general school fund, according to law.

Those who are in a position to know are entitled to give an explanation of the truth of the matter. The law provides that this fund can be invested in county or municipal bonds, bearing interest, and if the money is lying idle a satisfactory reason for it can probably be given.

Four deaths from cholera near London are reported. It is hoped that the stringent quarantine measures adopted by the United States government last summer will be applied again. With a Democratic Congress on their hands, and a Democratic tariff about to go into effect, the people of this country are already sorely afflicted, and are in no condition to wrestle with a cholera plague.

The statement that in one Canadian store-house alone there are one million pounds of wool awaiting shipment to the United States when the tariff becomes a law, will be cheerful news to our wool growers.

RANDOM POLITICAL NOTES.

Politically, the past week has been fruitful of much that is interesting, and it cannot be said that the events which have crowded on each other in Congress have caused Republican stock to depreciate. On the contrary it is in the ascendancy, and Democratic hopes are correspondingly depressed. The bearing on the local situation is important. The failure of a Democratic Congress to carry out the pledges of the party, and its acceptance of the tariff bill which had been denounced by the entire party of the country, have been two additional causes of discouragement and disgust among West Virginia Democrats; and they are not a bit backward about letting it be known. The effect was almost instantly felt on the situation with regard to the selection of Democratic candidates for Congress in this and the Fourth district, but it came too late to prevent Mr. Alderson's renomination in the Third district. In the Second district the Democrats will allow Mr. Wilson's nomination, but his insistence on placing his products on the free list has not inspired them with that enthusiasm which portends a hearty endorsement at the polls. Here, in the First district, Mr. Pendleton's renomination has been rendered improbable, and in the Fourth district the opposition to Mr. Capohart has been strengthened, on account of their votes to surrender Democratic principles and accept the measure which few citizens of any party wanted.

As to Mr. Pendleton, it looks now, almost on the eve of the convention, as if the federal office holders who are under obligations to him for favors received and who hope for favors yet to come, will not be able to pull him through the convention safely. They have worked early and late setting up delegations for him, but have signally failed in some counties, while in others where they thought they had succeeded there has been a revulsion of feeling. Perhaps Mr. Pendleton's own expressed indifference as to his fate is in a large measure responsible for this state of affairs. As I have said before, he is afraid to make the race again, and would have declared his unwillingness to try it long ago, could he have done so with propriety. He knows the poor chances for Democratic success this year, and his indifference is not, therefore, surprising. Had he thought there was the slightest hope for his re-election he would have "lusted" for the nomination as in past years. It may yet develop that other gentlemen who are prominently mentioned may conceive it to be wiser to run away "to live to fight another day," and that after all Mr. Pendleton will be forced to the sacrifice, but in view of present movements, that is only a probability. The principal factor in the situation at present is Prosecuting Attorney John A. Howard, of this county and city. And thereby hangs a tale:

It was not until the anti-Pendleton feeling became so strong that it would not down, did Mr. Howard decide to enter the field and become an active candidate, and even then he did so with some nervousness, owing to the uncertainties that are ahead if he receives the nomination. Like all the others he realizes that there is nothing more uncertain than Democratic success this year in the First district, and, like the others, he prefers to assume the attitude of a man who is about to have an empty honor thrust upon him, and allow his friends, more enthusiastic than discreet, to do the hustling for delegates. Mr. Howard has a laudable ambition to go to Congress. The bee has been buzzing in his bonnet for several years past, but he was doubtful about making a drive for the nomination this year. However, the developments have been such that the wisdom of not renominating Mr. Pendleton is apparent, and Mr. Howard is shrewd enough to see that it is now or never with him. To refuse the solicitations of his friends this year would weaken the chances for him in the future, and it would be better policy for him to show a willingness to make a sacrifice than to stand off and wait until the chances for the success of his party are improved, if that time should ever come. So his friends have been allowed to be active in his interest through the district, and they have met with a degree of success that warrants them in claiming considerable strength in the convention, if not complete success of the effort to nominate their favorite.

There are insiders to movements of this kind and the Howard boom is not an exception. The chief feature of it is that it is the move of the office-holding ring in Ohio county, and it may be found that there are dual back of it, beside the family arrangement to send Mr. Howard to Congress and his father-in-law to the legislature. It is pretty generally understood that the program as at present arranged by the office-holding crowd, contemplates that if Mr. Howard is so fortunate, or unfortunate, as to break into Congress, his successor as prosecuting attorney will be his partner, M. D. Post, who a year or so ago came here from Clarkburg to go into training for the position, if they have control of the appointing power when the time comes. It is expected that Mr. Post, in turn, will deliver to Mr. Howard, when it is needed, the Harrison county delegation in the convention, or so much of it as he can control through the influence of his father, Ira Post, of Clarkburg. A combination of this kind between the Ohio county office-holding ring and the Harrison county end of the deal, if there are no slip-ups, might prove invincible, so far as the control of the convention goes. Whether Mr. Post will be able to carry out his part of the program or not remains to be seen. With the unexpected term of the prosecuting attorney in sight he has an incentive to work hard to that end. The Harrison county delegation is at present instructed for its own candidate, Mr. Scott, but Mr. Scott's chances for the nomination are very weak since the speech he made Thursday denouncing a large body of Democrats for treating him badly, and he will drop out of sight on the first ballot. Then will come the opportunity to carry out the deal with the Ohio county ring, providing the Harrison county delegates will permit themselves to be sold for a mess of pottage by the bosses.

But "there's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip," and while Mr. Howard has the inside track at present, unlooked for circumstances may arise. Colonel Ben Wilson's sarcastic refusal to be instructed for by the Harrison county convention, for instance, may have only been in the nature of a "bluff." The colonel has many friends in the district, and the Wilson talk is something more than wind. Colonel Wilson is not the sort of a man who would accept the nomination, under the present circumstances, unless it was tendered him unanimously, and that is what his friends and admirers are scheming for, whether with his sanction or not, I do not know. They look upon a possible four-cornered fight between Howard, Pendleton, Scott and Lewis men in the convention with a great deal of satisfaction. Should such a fight develop, as they pray and hope it will, they will wait for proper conditions and the opportune moment to spring the magic name of Wilson upon the convention and cause a stampede that will sweep it like a cyclone. A beautiful scheme, truly. But its success will require shrewd work, with the chances very much against it. A similar move was made in the Wheeling convention of 1888, when Mr. Pendleton, by personal hustling on the floor of the convention, and pleading for votes, secured his first nomination. There had been several ballots and there was an apparent deadlock. Suddenly Colonel Wilson's name was sprung. It didn't prove very magnetic. On the contrary, it almost caused a row. The Ohio county delegation killed the Wilson movement with one blow, not only by hissing it down, but by openly charging Colonel Wilson with treachery toward the late Hon. J. H. Good—a treachery which, they claimed, not only lost the district for the Democrats, but hastened to an early grave one of the most brilliant lights of the Democratic party. Colonel Wilson's enthusiastic friends should bear in mind that all of those devoted Ohio county friends of Mr. Good are not dead. Some of them will be in the Clarkburg convention next Tuesday.

Down in the Third congressional district both parties now have their candidates in the field. The Democrats start into their campaign handicapped by the fact that their standard-bearer is one of the Democratic congressmen who have been weighed in the balance and found wanting—one of the majority that voted to surrender Democratic principles and sacrifice the issue on which the party had gained power after many years of hard struggling. On the other hand the Republicans have nominated a man of great popularity, who is well fitted to correctly represent the people of the district and state, and to legislate on business questions in a business way. Mr. Huling's nomination is regarded by the Republicans of the district as the strongest that could possibly be made. He possesses all the elements of strength required of a candidate, besides which he is an indefatigable "hunter," and an aggressive fighter. His friends are not all Republicans, for among his warmest supporters will be found life-long Democrats. The vote of Kanawha county is an important factor in the Third district. When the Republicans there poll their maximum vote the Democracy has little hope in the district. The enthusiasm inspired by Huling's candidacy will not only bring out this vote, but the majority will be increased by the addition of Democrats who are tired of the change they voted for in 1892.

Last night's mail brought me three little verses from an inspired Republican of the Second district, who requests that I insert them among my political notes. He asserts that he is no poet, (which is an unnecessary explanation), but that when he read in his favorite morning paper that the four Wilson "popgun" bills had gone to the senate finance committee, a poetic genius seemed to suddenly be born within him and it burst forth as follows:

"Those popgun bills
 To cure our ills
 Have reached their final goal.
 Our Johnson N.,
 And other men
 Must find some better role.
 "Poor William L.
 The truth to tell,
 Has done his level best;
 But it is plain
 That he'll remain
 At home and take a rest.
 "So here's a toast,
 And 'tis no least,
 For it is plain as day:
 Good bye to 'Will,'
 And his free bill,
 He's going home to stay."

Even Democratic papers are having their share of fun at the expense of the Democratic house of representatives for its surrender of principles for the sake of doing something in response to the cry from the rank and file. The Democratic Baltimore Sun, the morning after that subject surrendered, and the passage by the house of the four measures which ex-Speaker Reed denominated "popgun bills," published the following war anecdote in its editorial columns and left its readers to make the application:

As we all know horses became very scarce toward the end of the war, and as dismounted cavalrymen were sent to the infantry a remount became a serious question with many troops. Jim—of the Rockbridge troop, had lost his horse, and, unable to get another, possessed himself of a white mule named Simon. Jim became very proud of his mule and was fond of his prize. "He never gets tired, lives on nothing and has got more sense than the general," asserted Jim. But one day a squirrel was enjoying a dinner with a sympathetic farmer when a sudden alarm was given. "Run, boys, run," the Yankees are coming. There was mounting in hot haste, and some escaped by the front gate and some by the rear. Jim dashed at the front gate, but Simon, displaying his mule's instincts for the first time, looked at the front gate and some by the rear gate, but Simon balked again. Poor Jim looked over his shoulder, saw the blue coats rapidly approaching, threw his arms around Simon's neck and called in accented tones, "Oh, Simon, for God's sake go somewhere!"

The application is plain, and I reproduce the story for the benefit of appreciative Democrats who read these columns.

A PERTINENT ENQUIRY.

Are Pot Democratic Banks Being Favored by the State Administration?
 To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

Sir:—Can you tell me where and how the surplus arising from the school fund is being invested by the state board of public works? From the last official report of the superintendent of schools I see that there is a very large amount of this money uninvested, and I have understood that it is being kept uninvested in pot Democratic banks in Charleston, Huntington and Martinsburg. Kindly give a constant reader such information as you may have on the subject.

THE FRENCH PREMIER.

The Intended Victim of a Dynamite Plot.
 The Details.

PARIS, August 17.—According to Le Journal a plot to assassinate Premier Dupuy has been discovered.

The premier is in the Vernet-Les-Bains, not far from the Spanish border. He is accompanied by three Paris detectives, who are supposed to have discovered the plot through the presence of several militant anarchists in the neighborhood of Vernet.

The anarchists, says the Journal, had been warned of their danger the night before the police expected to arrest them and fled to Spain. The main plot, it is alleged, was hatched in Barcelona by the Spanish and French anarchists. Three men were designated by lot to execute it. They were to cross the border about the middle of August and were to assassinate the premier during his absence from Paris.

The bomb which was to be used was made in Spain although it is not known that the Barcelona anarchists did the work. The police in Barcelona deny that there is an anarchist laboratory in that city and say that the bomb must have been secured elsewhere.

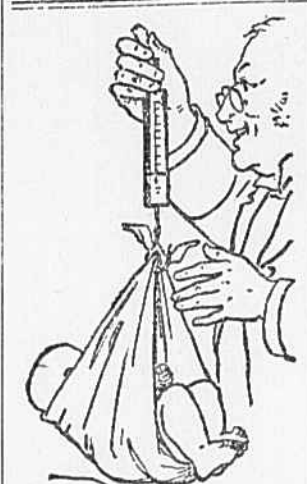

The plot was discovered after the three anarchist agents had started for France.
